Modern Slavery Act Statement 2019

Commitment

This statement is published in accordance with the Modern Slavery Act 2015.

i2O Water continue to operate a zero-tolerance approach to slavery and human trafficking. We remain committed to eradicating any and all forms of slavery or human trafficking in line with the Modern Slavery Act 2015. We expect the same from our suppliers and will work with them to help raise awareness and prevent slavery and human trafficking. We enjoy long term and productive relationships with many of our suppliers which carry high levels of trust and confidence in all our efforts to work against modern slavery and human trafficking.

All our employees commit to the values of our organisation which include:

- Trust & Respect
- Teamwork
- Enjoyment
- Commitment
- Customer Focus

These values are instilled throughout our policies and practices, as well as being demonstrated through our employees' actions - including our supply chain activities. We procure a range of materials and products from different parts of the world, and prior to engaging with a new supplier we complete supplier and sub-contractor audits. These audits are reviewed and re-assessed regularly to ensure compliance with our standards.
